Species of Space by Robert Powell

Species of Space is a solo exhibition by Edinburgh-based artist Robert Powell. The collection of works is a meditation on the city as an idea and as a physical artefact, how it's constructed and how it's conserved. It is about the universal city and about Edinburgh in particular, but it is also about citizens, the lives and stories of those who live within the city. Featuring a laser-cut city of miniature cross-sections and a doll's high rise, in Species of Space we peer through whose cut away facades to see tiny inhabitants resting in their daily lives scenes from history, art, literature and mythology, recreating Walter Benjamin's phantasmagorias of the interior where the living room becomes a box in the theatre of the world.

Species of Space contains work published with Edinburgh Printmakers.

Edinburgh Printmakers give special thanks to Mekkit, Manchester.
